Notes from the Jury

- 10–15 problems, not sorted by difficulty
- The team that solves the most problems wins
- Ties are broken by lower penalty time
 - sum of time-to-solve over all problems
 - +20 minutes for each incorrect submission on a problem that was later solved by that team

Possible results of a submission:

- Accepted
- Wrong Answer
- Time Limit Exceeded
- Run Time Error
- Compile Error (no time penalty)

If more than one non-accepted verdict, only one of them is shown

Click on your submission in DOMjudge to see compiler output and results on samples.

- During the scoreboard freeze, submissions will be shown as “Pending” on the public scoreboard
- You will still see the verdicts of your own submissions
- Results will be revealed during the award ceremony

- Guarantee: all problems are solvable in C++, Python, Java, Kotlin
- There will be at least one multi-pass problem, both in the test session and in the main contest
- More hints and advice: <https://2025.nwerc.eu/jury>
 - Also available as PDF on your contest machines

- For each test case, your code is run multiple times
- In each pass after the first, your input may depend on the output of the previous passes
- For each multi-pass problem:
 - The expected protocol is described in the statement
 - There is a `testing_tool.py` available from DOMjudge
 - The testing tool simulates running multiple passes. Look inside for documentation.
- The output validator decides how many passes there are. This may be more than two!
- The time and memory limit apply to each pass individually
